MOB WRECKS CAB DRIVEN BY STRIKEBREAKER

Chauffeur and Guards Run Away and Machine Is Smashed.

50 ESCAPE FROM GARAGE

Men Held Prisoners for Week

Fight Way Through Armed Guards to Gate.

An electric cab operated by a strike-breaking chauffeur and guarded by two private detectives was smashed to pieces this afternoon in West Twenty-fourth street by a crowd of 200 sympathizers with the electric chauffeurs of the New York Transportation Company, who are striking for a $2 day of ten hours.

The strike-breaker and the guards fled, deserting the cab while it was the centre of a storm of bricks and stones. The cab had been followed from the main garage at Forty-ninth street and Eighth avenue to the Twenty-third street ferry. There it turned around, carrying no passengers, and started back.

The crowd started the attack at Eighth avenue and Twenty-fourth street by hurling several stones at the strike-breaker. He turned the machine east into Twenty-fourth street and put on all speed to avoid the mob. A brick hit one of the sleuths on the back, and he spurted ahead of the cab and disappeared. The second sleuth, who was driving the cab, was hit on the head by a half way to Seventh avenue, while the mob was falling all about him, and deserted his vehicle. He darted over to Seventh avenue and boarded a car to get away from the crowd chasing him.

Demolished the Cab.

The other bicycle sleuth put on power and got away, going down to Seventh avenue. The mob, after chasing the fugitives, returned to the stranded and deserted cab and soon demolished it. They sent many bricks through the sides and back, tore out the batteries, cut the tires and ruined the steering gear and other mechanical parts.

Fifty of the strike-breakers imprisoned in the main garage of the New York Transportation Company, Forty-ninth street and Eighth avenue, engaged the battalion of armed private police sent there in a desperate fight to-day, and, assisted by a roundsmen and fifteen patrolmen, won their liberty.

CROSSED WIRES TIE UP BROADWAY CARS.

Water, Sand and Extinguishers Used in Vain—Conductor Turns Switch and Car Goes On.

As south-bound car No. 178, of the Broadway line, was nearing Twenty-ninth street late this afternoon there was an explosion in the rear, and a huge sheet of scintillating flame shot out. The vehicle came to a sudden stop, throwing passengers to the floor.

The blaze grew larger, and men rushed into the Gilesey House and the Hotel Breslin after fire extinguishers. Grenades after grenades were hurled on the blaze in vain.

"Throw sand on it," some one cried, and a cart which happened to be passing was relieved of part of its load, and the blaze kept on as it did when buckets of water were emptied on it. Then a truck-looking young woman declared the wires from the batteries were crossed, and the conductor turned the switch, thus extinguishing the blaze, and the car went on after fifteen minutes delay.

FLASH OF MIRROR BLINDS POOL-ROOM AGENTS AT TRACK

Pinkerton Man at Aqueduct Throws Reflection in Man's Eyes on Tower and He Can't See Horses Finish.

By FRANK W. THORP.

AQUEDUCT RACE TRACK, N. Y., Nov. 5.—The Pinkertons to-day adopted a novel and effective method of putting the pool-rooms out of business.

When they arrived at the track to-day they found the steel tower erected by the pool-room men doing business at its old stand. The tower was put out of commission yesterday by the Bureau of Buildings because the pool-room men had failed to get a permit.

But the Pinkertons had a card up their sleeves. It was an idea borrowed from schemers of years gone by.

Just before the horses went to post in the first race a Pinkerton man appeared on the field directly opposite the tower. He had a mirror under his arm. He waited patiently until the horses had reached the last furlong. Then he got into action.

By carefully manipulating the mirror in the sunlight he cast a reflection into the eyes of the pool-room agent on the tower platform, blinding the latter so effectively that he could not see how the horses finished. The scheme worked successfully until the sun died down.

Some years ago a race-track crowd worked the mirror idea in a race and cleaned up a fortune. It was the most remarkable performance ever witnessed on the turf.

In the race the favorite was prohibitive. It was conceded by all that the horse stood at the rear end of the grand stand holding a person over her head. The paragon concealed a mirror. As the horses neared the finish the favorite was hit on the head by a reflection into the favorite's eyes. The favorite was hit on the head by a reflection into the favorite's eyes.

A woman was selected to do the trick. She stood at the rear end of the grand stand holding a person over her head. The paragon concealed a mirror. As the horses neared the finish the favorite was hit on the head by a reflection into the favorite's eyes. The favorite was hit on the head by a reflection into the favorite's eyes.

Athlete Wins Handicap. Athlete won the Glencoe Handicap to-day after knocking nearly everything down in the first part of the race. After that he took the lead and won easily by three lengths from Halton, who easily beat West for third money. No claim of foul was made against Athlete.

Hoschen was a 1 to 2 chance in the opening dash, and he came home with the money. He was doing his best at the end to beat Zienap. The latter with a shade more luck might have won.

The colt entry consisting of the Com. Fontaine and Duclian was a strong choice over the only other starter, Locked Out, in the steeplechase. Com. Fontaine won in a gallop from Locked Out. Duclian had speed, but finally tumbled and threw his boy.

Royal Lady was plunged on in the third race, but she had no speed and ran a bad race. Her strong arm, a chance, opened a big gap, but at the end was closing up and Beauliere closed strong to win. Ben Strong on the post.

Cressina Back to Form.

Cressina, second choice in the first race, went to the fire at the start, made all the running and won in a drive by three-quarters of a length from Martin Doyle, who was six lengths in front of Tommy Waddell.

MOTHER DEAD, CRIPPLE COULD NOT GIVE ALARM

For Three Days Helpless Woman Was Unable to Attract Attention.

STARVED BESIDE BODY

Slightest Movement Meant Keenest Agony for Widowed Daughter.

Made helpless by rheumatism, Mrs. Mary Donnegan, of No. 255 Adams street, Brooklyn, has sat starving beside the body of her dead mother since last Friday afternoon, unable to attract attention of passersby until to-day. For three days and nights her infirmities have held her a prisoner in the room with the dead woman. The only person she succeeded in calling before to-day heartlessly or drunkenly went away and left her to her terrible vigil.

This afternoon a tenant of the building went to the Adams street police station, which is diagonally across the street, and reported that there was a dead woman on the top floor. Detectives Robertson and Hynes discovered Mrs. Donnegan sitting helpless in a rocking chair beside the body of her mother, Mrs. Katherine Ryan. She told a startling story of her isolation within a stone's throw of the police station.

Widows Lived Alone. Mrs. Donnegan said that her mother, who was eighty-four years old, lay down on the bed Friday afternoon and, as the daughter supposed, went to sleep. The two women, both widows, lived alone in the top floor room, where the aged mother cared for and supported her daughter, a helpless invalid crippled by rheumatism and who could not move a foot without the most excruciating agony. Late Friday night the watchman realized that her mother was not sleeping, and her ordeal began.

Saturday came and dragged away, the invalid unable to move any further than the doorway, where by her faint cries she could not attract any one to the top floor. She could not walk or creep further. In hope that she would come, the woman fell into her rocker.

Once during the day she heard footsteps in the hallway and raised herself on her tottering limbs, which writhed beneath her in the fearful pain the effort cost her, and called out. But no one came to the door the person had hurried away and the deserted woman was left quivering with the agonies of the exertion. Later she went to a window and in faint, quivering tones called for help, but the rattle and ruck of the elevated train passing at this point drowned her cries.

Drunken Man Promised. On Sunday Mrs. Donnegan succeeded in attracting the attention of a man who was staggering around the hall way evidently intoxicated. She told him that there was a dead woman in the room and begged him to go to the police station and report it. The man promised to do so, but he never came. She was as though he believed it was all a ruse to get him into a cell. The invalid waited hopelessly all through the day and realized late last night that the messenger had failed to come.

This morning Mrs. Donnegan was desperate. She had lived since Friday afternoon on part of a loaf of bread and some water. Her body needed immediate attention. Braving herself to the doorway in spite of the tortures of her limbs, she remained there all morning, calling repeatedly until she had attracted the attention of a tenant. The latter ran to the police station across the street and the woman's long vigil was over.

In Need of Attention.

When the police left they sent for the Coroner and reported that the destitute invalid was in pressing need of medical attention. Mrs. Donnegan said that the woman was once well to do. She was first married to a wealthy man named O'Brien. Their son, John O'Brien, who is a priest in Boston. When the first husband died Mrs. O'Brien married Ryan, who before his death was employed in the Custom-House.

Fight So Bitter that Both Candidates Will Keep Up Speaking Campaigns Until Midnight, but Managers on Each Side Predict Victory.

LABOR RALLIES THOUSANDS TO HEAR MR. HUGHES SPEAK.

Betting Still Continues at Odds of 5 to 1 Against Hearst, but Little Real Money Is Wagered—"Dough Day" at the Party Headquarters.

The bitterest gubernatorial campaign that New York has been through in years will close at midnight, when the rival candidates will round up a final tour of Manhattan. Although the managers of Mr. Hughes and Mr. Hearst claim 200,000 majority for each of the candidates, it is worthy of remark that both of them will keep at work up to the last minute.

Charles F. Murphy surprised the Tammany Hall leaders to-day by predicting a majority of 120,000 for Hearst in Greater New York. Chairman Woodruff, of the Republican State Committee, says that Greater New York will give Hughes a substantial majority and that he will get 150,000 up-State. Mr. Hearst, in all his speeches to-night, will claim that he will be elected by 200,000 majority.

PLANS TO BLOCK FRAUDS.

Extraordinary efforts have been made to prevent illegal voting. Orders transferring 5,000 policemen for duty at the polls in strange precincts were issued to-day. Something like 10,000 warrants have been issued to State Superintendent of Elections, Morgan. The Hearst organization, which complained of thousands of illegal registrations last year, has not made a single complaint this year, and Tammany Hall has made only one. The Republican organization has reported to Supt. Morgan nearly 5,000 alleged illegal registrations.

There was very little real money bet to-day. While the odds were nominally 4 to 1 and 5 to 1 on Hughes, these odds were hard to get. Many bets were made at even money that Hughes will not get 50,000 in the State.

LABOR MEN CHEER HUGHES.

Charles E. Hughes, addressing a union labor audience numbering more than 5,000, at Bethune and West streets, this afternoon was given a remarkable reception. He made the strongest pledges to union labor he has made in the campaign. Tom Ilock, the labor candidate, who was turned down by Hearst, spoke at the same meeting.

Tammany and Republican leaders were given their annual allowances of money for election day expenses to-day. The Republicans got $30 an election district. Tammany leaders got all the way from $60 to $200 an election district. The Tammany leaders who are following McClellan did not appear at the Wagman when the allotment was made.

5 TO 1 ON HUGHES CLOSES THE BETTING

Many wagers were made on the curb to-day at the odds of 5 to 1. G. B. Salisbury and Co., of No. 53 Broadway, acting as commissioners, placed $5,000 to $1,000 that Hughes would win. Allen McGraw & Co., through their representative, George Dates, placed $5,000 at odds of 1 to 5 that Hughes will win.

At one time the odds dropped to 4 to 1, but no wagers were made at these figures, the holders of Hearst money holding out for 5 to 1.

The largest wager entered was that placed by George B. Buchanan, of the New York Stock Exchange, who bet William Winchell & Co. $20,000 to $5,000 that Hughes will win.

HEARST WILL CARRY CITY BY 120,000—MURPHY

Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall, changed his mind to-day about making a pre-election estimate, and in a statement to newspaper reporters in the Hall declared that Mr. Hearst would be elected beyond any doubt. The "wise one" recalled that heretofore Mr. Murphy had been repeatedly accurate in election predictions.

"After opening the envelopes in which all of the Manhattan and Bronx district leaders submitted their estimates, based on careful canvassing, I am positive that Mr. Hearst will not only be elected Governor of New York but that he will carry the city by a vote equal to or greater than that given to Mr. Hearst," said Mr. Murphy.

Coler's plurality was 120,000. It was said on Saturday that the leaders, in Hearst's plurality at only 40,000. To-day Mr. Murphy was positive in his statement and confident in his manner when he said Hearst's plurality would be 120,000 or greater.

"As to Brooklyn," the leader continued, "I have been receiving many reports, and I am equally positive that Hearst will carry that borough. The fact there, the character of it, will certainly give Mr. Hearst a very large plurality."

"I have only had fragmentary reports from up-State, but they come from doubtful places and indicate that Hearst will positively be elected. Especially is this true when taken in connection with the city vote."

The reports I received on Saturday and Sunday from the Manhattan district leaders were not opened until to-day, so no estimate could be made before. I have looked all of them over and after a careful consideration am sure of the election of Mr. Hearst as Governor. The vote for Hearst in the city will surpass many. It will probably be the largest plurality Tammany ever gave any man. His plurality will certainly be as great as that of Coler and probably much larger."
